Silo Plange Mühle: Topping-out ceremony took place

Date
04.02.2016

The wooden silo in the historic ensemble Plange Mühle designed by ingenhoven architects is being rebuilt since January 2015 and progresses well. Today, numerous guests celebrated the topping-out ceremony for the building which is listed for preservation. This autumn, the silo will be ready for occupation. On the inside, it maintains the industrial character of the former silo with a surface over 4.000 square meters. ingenhoven architects is headquartered in the main building of Plange Mühle, which was lavishly converted into a modern six-storey office and commercial building in 2002/2003.
