The Association of German Engineers organizes the competition annually for students of architecture, civil engineering, building services and facility management to raise awareness of the shared responsibility in creating a livable built environment. This year's competition focusses on the train station "Cologne Trade Fair/Deutz", which is a national traffic junction on the right bank of the river Rhine. Christoph Ingenhoven will assess and judge the designs of the finalists after their live presentation. Afterwards, an award ceremony will take place.
