“His buildings demonstrate beauty, modesty, boldness and invention as the foundation and basis of his practice. His works embody a moral commitment and conviction to improve the microclimate of the city, supporting biodiversity, and fostering people’s general wellbeing.” With this reasoning Christian Narkiewicz-Laine, President of The Chicago Athenaeum Museum for Architecture and Design justifies the decision.

The prestigious award is given by The European Centre for Architecture Art Design and Urban Studies and The Chicago Athenaeum: Museum of Architecture and DesignFull jury statement
