At present, the World Architecture Festival takes place in Singapore's Marina Bay Sands. The winners of the second day were announced a few hours ago.

Christoph Ingenhoven had presented the project Lanserhof Tegernsee live in front of the international jury yesterday. The jury has chosen the project as winner in the category Hotel & Leisure - Completed Building.

Since its completion in 2014, Lanserhof has already won countless design and sustainability prizes. It combines the comfort of a luxury hotel with the most modern medical care under one roof.

The architecture matches and highlights the resort's health philosophy. With its clean lines, the cubic building fits seamlessly into the landscape. All architectural decisions are consistent with the criteria of the German Sustainable Building Council (DNGB).
